

CREATIVE FINANCING ALTERNATIVES.

From The Specialists In Residential & Commercial Real Estate Closings.

Lauren Kohl-Helbig

Conventional loans from financing institutions have been recently abundant. Thanks to historically low interest rates, lenders are introducing a variety of loan programs allowing for smaller down payments and low- or no-documentation loans to borrowers with good credit scores. Not everyone qualifies.

Factors such as self-employment, a recent bankruptcy, a poor credit rating or a career change could prevent a home purchaser who is otherwise capable of making a monthly payment from obtaining a conventional mortgage. The creative financing techniques discussed below present a viable alternative in some situations. However, the tax and legal consequences of each may be unique to each situation. Buyers and sellers interested in pursuing creative financing alternatives should consult their attorney and/or tax advisor.

Owner Financing: In an Owner Financing scenario, the seller, rather than a financial institution, loans the buyer the funds to purchase a property. A note and mortgage will be drafted by either party's attorney and executed by the buyer at closing. The terms of repayment are negotiable between the parties and generally include an interest rate that exceeds the market rate and a maturity date of ten years or less.

Advantages to a seller may include an attractive rate of return and income tax deferral. Buyers may save hundreds of dollars by avoiding lender's closing costs paid at settlement.

The mortgage executed at closing provides security for the repayment to the seller. If the buyer fails to make the payments, the seller simply files an action for foreclosure, after which the seller takes the property back or is repaid as a result of a foreclosure auction. Because there are costs associated with foreclosure proceedings, a seller should be reluctant to lend more than 80% of the value of the property.

Agreement For Deed: Also referred to as a Land Contract, this arrangement also provides for payments to be made from a buyer to a seller. The difference however, is that the seller does not convey the property by deed to the buyer at closing. Rather, the agreement states that the seller will convey the property upon receiving all of the payments due under the agreement from the Buyer. Although there is no mortgage, the seller's remedy against a defaulting buyer is still achieved through a foreclosure action.

Lease Purchase: A Lease Purchase Agreement provides that a buyer make regularly scheduled lease payments to a seller over a specified period of time before completing the actual purchase transaction. The agreement is negotiable between the parties and may include provisions applying a certain portion of the lease payments be applied to the purchase price.

Many sellers prefer lease purchase arrangements to straight leases because they include provisions for relatively substantial, non-refundable deposits. Lease purchase buyers generally take better care of a property than straight renters because of their anticipated ownership.

Benefits to purchasers may include the ability to lock in a future sales price at current rates and the opportunity to establish credit and equity in anticipation of the purchase transaction.

This article is meant only to introduce prospective buyers and sellers to some of the creative financing alternatives. As always, please consult your attorney before entering into a purchase or sale agreement.

- Lauren Kohl-Helbig, Attorney At Law

Who's On Your Side Of The Closing Table?

Lauren Kohl-Helbig

Attorney At Law

Protecting Your Interests At Closing

Call For A Title Insurance Quote
941-365-1166

LAW OFFICES OF
GIBSON & KOHL-HELBIG, P.L.

Practicing Residential and Commercial Real Estate
1800 Second Street, Suite 901 ♦ Sarasota, FL 34236
www.sarasotaclosings.com

On The Client's Side.

Is your real estate contract in your best interest? Whether you're buying or selling, Lauren Kohl-Helbig can thoroughly review your contract and explain the details to you clearly, in laymen's terms. As an attorney, Lauren Kohl-Helbig is qualified to catch potential problems or see certain advantages that a title company can't; and your cost of her experience is comparable to that of a title company.

On The Realtor's Side.

As an active REALTOR® for 8 years, Lauren Kohl-Helbig understands all aspects of your business and what you need to help closings go smoothly. With a practice that's technology-driven, she can provide your critical documents quickly and efficiently.

The hiring of a lawyer is an important decision that should not be based solely on advertisements. Before you decide, ask us to send you free written information about our qualifications and experience.